

How a Special Needs Trust Works

Special needs trusts allow family members to provide some benefits to a disabled child without causing him or her to lose government benefits.

Items to Consider

- Parents can act as the trustees.
- Trust should be separate from the family trust.
- The trust may be revocable or irrevocable.
- Beneficiaries should be named to receive trust assets if the disabled child dies.
- Family members should discuss management of the trust and how it will be funded.

This is a highly specialized document and should be drafted by an attorney who is experienced in the areas of disability, government benefits, and estate planning.

Disclosure Notice

The information that follows is intended to serve as a basis for further discussion with your financial, legal, tax and/or accounting advisors. It is not a substitute for competent advice from these advisors. The actual application of some of these concepts may be the practice of law and is the proper responsibility of your attorney. The application of other concepts may require the guidance of a tax or accounting advisor. The company or companies listed below are not authorized to practice law or to provide legal, tax, or accounting advice.

Although great effort has been taken to provide accurate data and explanations, and while the sources are deemed reliable, the information that follows should not be relied upon for preparing tax returns or making investment decisions. This information has neither been audited by nor verified by the company, or companies, listed below and is therefore not guaranteed by them as to its accuracy.

If a numerical analysis is shown, the results are neither guarantees nor projections, and actual results may differ significantly. Any assumptions as to interest rates, rates of return, inflation, or other values are hypothetical and for illustrative purposes only. Rates of return shown are not indicative of any particular investment, and will vary over time. Any reference to past performance is not indicative of future results and should not be taken as a guaranteed projection of actual returns from any recommended investment.